

OUTLINE OF TOPICS

	PAOB
1. The different objects of knowledge and opinion: being and becoming; universal and particular; the necessary and the contingent	312
2. The difference between the acts and sources of knowing and opining	313
2a. The influence of the emotions on the formation of opinion: wishful thinking, rationalization, prejudice
2b. The will as cause of assent in acts of opinion	314
2c. Reasoning and argument concerning matters of opinion: comparison of demonstration and persuasion, principles and assumptions, axioms and postulates
2d. Reason, experience, and authority as sources of opinion
3. Opinion, knowledge, and truth	315
3a. The truth of knowledge and of right opinion: their difference with respect to manner of acquisition, stability, and teachability
3b. Certain and probable, adequate and inadequate knowledge: degrees of certitude; modes of assent
3c. The skeptical reduction of human judgments to opinion	316
4. Opinion, belief, and faith
4a. Comparison of supernatural or religious faith with science and opinion	317
4b. Criticism of superstitious or dogmatic belief as opinion without foundation or warrant
5. Freedom in the sphere of opinion	318
5a. Rights and duties with respect to the expression of opinion
5b. Advantages and disadvantages of freedom of discussion
6. Opinion in the realm of morals
6a. Good and evil as matters of opinion: moral standards as customs or conventions reflecting prevalent opinion
6b. The inexactitude of moral principles as applied to particular cases	319
7. The social and political significance of public opinion
7a. The value of the majority opinion: the distinction between matters to be determined by the expert or by a consensus
7b. Majority rule, its merits and dangers: protections against the false weight of numbers	320